Aufbauwerk der Jugend is an organisation dedicated to social juvenile labour in Tyrol. It is preparing young adults with special needs for working life. ## Short Description

Organisations providing service to people with special needs are facing great challenges. Their employees are undergoing a lot of physical and mental stress. The Public Employment Agency (AMS) is helping these organisations through further educating their staff so that they learn to better deal with their challenges. Education takes place through the means of “qualification networks“, an initiative of the AMS and ESF (European Social Fonds). These networks provide a sustainable contribution to the development of companies.

In May 2007 P+K Unternehmensberatung set up a qualification network for organizations providing services to people with special needs. 20 participating organisations received customised, life-cycle oriented trainings for their employees with the overall goal to promote and sustain long-term workability. Up to 70% of educational cost was being covered by AMS and ESF.
